

A Large Plant.
The Henry R. Worthington Hydraulic Works at the corner of Rapelye and Van Brunt streets, Brooklyn, are shortly to be removed to Harrison, N. J., to occupy the $3,000,000 plant of the International Steam Pump Company, now nearly completed. The Brooklyn site consists of two city blocks, or about four and one-half acres, while the Harrison plant is located on a thirty-five acre tract and contains eighteen acres of floor space. The Worthington Company is one of the largest manufacturing concerns in Brooklyn, having been founded in 1843 by Henry R. Worthington, the inventor of the duplex steam pump and other hydraulic devices. About 2,000 men are employed in the Brooklyn works, and many will undoubtedly go to Harrison, which will accommodate from 5,000 to 6,000 men. The Brooklyn works will probably be sold, the company having already disposed of its large foundries at Elizabethport, N. J.

News from Proctor's.
A number of important engagements have recently been made for the Proctor circuit, which include, among others: Miss Mabel McKinley, Henry Dixey, Robert Hilliard and Robert Lorraine, in Frances Aymar Matthews' play, "A Little Tragedy in Ties Isle," which was given its first production at Mr. Proctor's Newark Theatre April 11. The engagement of Miss McKinley marks an important event, for this niece of the martyr President has made a most tremendous success in her vaudeville career ever since her debut in the West. It was at first supposed that Miss McKinley's play to the public would be made solely through her name, but to the surprise, even of her managers, she has made a solid vaudeville success, and presents one of the best specialties of its kind. Neither Mr. Dixey, nor Mr. Hilliard is a stranger to vaudeville, but both have been filling engagements on the dramatic stage recently and the Proctor engagements mark their return to vaudeville.

How Women Use Political Power.
The citizens of Bowling Green, Kentucky, are availing the question of pure water. The committee in charge of the matter has received the following communication from Joseph R. Rider, an authority on filtration, water purification and sewage:

"I am glad to hear of your city that another municipality is about to be added to those forced to consider that all-important question, pure water, through the energy of her prominent women. The city of Philadelphia, through the New Century Women's Club, in 1900 was forced to take action in this matter. In fact, I am sorry to confess that it is the energy of the women in many places where I have been identified with public questions that stirred the men with the votes to action."

Mr. Rider's testimony confirms that of the States where women are endowed with the ballot. This testimony is to the effect that wherever women concern themselves with affairs of government their aim is always the public good.

Grex Club Officers.
The new officers of the Grex Club of John Ridge are as follows: President, John K. Brandon; Vice-President, O. Brewster Chapman; Secretary, Clinton M. White; Treasurer, Clarence W. White. The officers of the Grex Salvage Corps are: Captain, Lucius S. Sigel; Lieutenant, Clarence W. White; First Sergeant, O. T. Woodley; Second Sergeant, F. Towley Piers; Third Sergeant, Wm. Currie; Engineer, Wm. C. Brandon.

PIGEON POLITICS.

the spirit of 'pigeon politics' until the people should speak again to them. "While I am speaking of these matters I take the opportunity to say that another great matter which should have the voice of the people is the preservation of our Sabbath, and the defense of all that it means to the church and State. Especial appeals are being made throughout all our churches during the week for the better observance of the Sabbath, and that our people everywhere may seek to give better support to Sabbath observance, and that they shall demand a stricter execution of all laws designed for the protection of the holy day.

"We, as citizens of this town, cannot too carefully look after our interests in this respect. Some things in connection with our recent decision, that we will not be annexed to the city of Newark, have brought to light certain dangers that lie close to hand. It was very apparent during that contest that money was freely circulated for the purpose of securing votes for annexation. There is pretty clear opinion as to the source whence this money came. It is quite evident that the brewers and the trolley company were anxious for annexation. It is often said that in war the things that our enemies want are not the things that we ought to let them have. Newark wants the annexation of Bloomfield that there might be an outlet for their people who desire Sunday excursions and visits to beer gardens. It is more than an open secret that options on property were had in our town looking to the prospect of opening beer gardens and pleasure resorts if annexation had become a fact.

"Our trolley corporation made a great show of doing a generous thing by holding out to us the prospect of a two-cent reduction in transfer fare if we would only become annexed to Newark, but the children of this generation are wiser than the children of light, and they foresaw that the opening of beer gardens and pleasure resorts in our beautiful town would mean a largely increased traffic for their lines, and so their seeming kindness would have returned in large profit into their own coffers.

"It is a source of great comfort to me, I think, nearly all of our citizens that the annexation project was defeated. I think the most ardent supporters are not so ready to admit that the result has been reached; but the peril is not over. The vision of prospective gains which seems so fair to the brewers and to the trolley corporation has given them a longing for our fair town. It was after Eve had looked at the apple, and had seen that it was pleasant to the eyes, that she longed to taste it, and did so. It is the great evil that followed in the world.

"These people have set their lustful eyes on our fair town as never before, and what they have not received in their project for annexation they will try to secure by other means; and I am raising no false cry of alarm when I say to you that it becomes us to guard most carefully our town and all its interests in connection with the observance of the Sabbath.

"If our police and other authorities could get the information that some of the neighbors to some of our drinking places might be able to give them might get to know that there is more Sabbath selling of strong drink in our community than many people imagine.

"As a rule, considering our proximity to the great city, the law has been fairly well observed in this regard, and those who are interested know that they are being watched, and have more or less of the public eye upon them. They will need to take heed, and at the same time let the voice of the people be heard. We have a simple number of licensed places for the selling of strong drink, and they have promised to keep the law. And the citizens of the community ought to demand to see to it that the law shall be strictly observed.

"We do not ask anybody to come to our community to engage in the sale of strong drink. If he engages in the business he does it at his own desire. He pays a large sum for the privilege, and by that payment recognizes the danger of his business to the welfare of the community, and he promises to observe a number of restrictions that have been placed around this privilege to safeguard the public as much as possible. He has promised to keep these laws. He has pledged himself to it by the giving of bonds. If he fails in any respect it is the duty of the people that their voice shall be heard, and that we shall demand the strictest compliance with all the laws.

"In addition to this we want to see to it that our authorities feel that the public is behind them, and that they will be supported by the people in all their efforts to restrict and suppress improper Sunday traffic, Sunday sales and Sunday games. It is better for us to watch the camel and see that it does not get his nose into our tent before we seek to thrust him out.

"Let us give fair notice to all the people interested that while Bloomfield welcomes those who come in quietness and peace and the observance of the law, we have no room for those who, by any disorder, would break down the peace and the Sabbath quiet of our comfortable community.

"Vallburgh has voted for annexation, and it will soon become an accomplished fact, without doubt. The people of Vallburgh, if we may believe the many things in the public prints, have become so accustomed to the breaking of the Sabbath, the presence of games and races of various kinds, that they may not be surprised at the increase of these things in their community. They have indeed seemed to welcome them.

"As they have made their own bed, so they can lie in it, but as for our community, we have not had those things in the past, we do not desire them in the future, and we will stand for the strict observance of the law, the protection and quiet of our Sabbath, the safety of our children and the general welfare of the people.

"Let the very first effort to open beer gardens, or to introduce public games on the Lord's day, receive an effectual quietus."
